Product Description of Fire Truck:

Fire trucks, also known as fire trucks, are vehicles designed and manufactured to be suitable for firefighters to ride, equipped with various firefighting equipment or fire extinguishing agents, and used by firefighting forces for firefighting, auxiliary firefighting or fire rescue.

Powerful, focused water stream, extensive coverage for maximum protection.

The firefighting apparatus allows for flexible and convenient maneuverability, with a gun body capable of horizontal and vertical rotation.

The fire monitor is capable of discharging water in both a straight stream and a spray pattern.

The primary specifications and performance parameters adhere to the criteria outlined in the Chinese standard GB19156-2003, titled "General Technical Requirements for Fire Monitors."

The performance of this fire monitor is outstanding, boasting high efficiency and a compact, aesthetically pleasing design. It offers user-friendly operation and easy maintenance.

Product Application of Fire Truck :

Temperature reduction: In hot weather, applying water to the road surface through sprinklers can effectively cool it down and safeguard against cracking caused by excessive heat.

Dust removal. The road surface is dusty, and sprinkling water can moisten the dust, effectively preventing the dust from flying up, thereby reducing air pollution.

Greening and gardening, watering roadside flowers and trees, or washing dust off trees. Used as a fire truck in an emergency.

Fire trucks are of various types and complex functions, and can be classified according to different standards. According to the load-bearing capacity of the fire truck chassis, they include micro fire trucks, light fire trucks, medium fire trucks, and heavy fire trucks; according to the appearance structure, they can be divided into single-bridge fire trucks, double-bridge fire trucks, flat-head fire trucks, and pointed-head fire trucks; according to the fire extinguishing agent, they can be divided into water tank fire trucks, dry powder fire trucks, and foam fire trucks.

Fire trucks have become increasingly specialized. For example, carbon dioxide fire trucks are mainly used to put out fires of valuable equipment, precision instruments, important cultural relics, books and archives; airport rescue fire trucks are dedicated to putting out plane crash fires and rescuing people on board; lighting fire trucks provide lighting for nighttime firefighting and rescue work; smoke exhaust fire trucks are particularly suitable for use in putting out fires in underground buildings and warehouses, etc.
